"Before falling into sin you were the adopted child of God. What a fatal change! But perhaps you make little account of having forfeited your God and eternal happiness by mortal sin. Although you are well aware that you have merited everlasting punishment, the thought that that will not come till after death, and death you regard as a thing of the dire distant future. Alas! do you not know that life is terribly uncertain, that sin itself hastens the approach of death?"

Father Hayes will preach tonight on the subject "The Universal Sentence."

"It sometimes happens that notwithstanding his crimes the sinner enjoys a certain term of uninterrupted prosperity; his health is excellent; he maintains his good name in the eyes of the world, etc. As long as things go on in this way he says to himself, 'I have sinned and what harm hath befallen me.' IDA MAY HUGG

A vacancy that will be hard to fill has been left in the school faculty by the sudden death of Miss Ida May Hugg. Miss Hugg was one of the best teachers the district ever knew. Her accomplishments were legion; her work was widely known.

First of all Miss Hugg was a teacher. She took her work seriously and realized to the fullest extent the great responsibility resting upon her in training aright the young under her care. She was a teacher inspired.

Always unselfish in her devotion to others and with a strength of personality that made her stand out conspicuously among those of her profession, she was a woman to be admired. Never was a teacher granted higher respect by pupils than Miss Hugg, and there was good and sufficient reason. With wonderful instinct and thoughtfulnes s she knew just when to render intelligent aid and to extend wise sympathy. They knew her as a friend.

In her daily life aside from her school duties her personality made her the admired and respected of all who knew her. One could not think of her save as a sympathetic friend. Her good qualities were not known alone to the intimates of her own family. Consequently her death is bound to be felt as a great and irreparable loss to the entire community.

BOASTFUL IGNORANCE

There are those, Dr. Samuel G. Dixon finds, who are silly enough to poo poo the warnings of those who know about matters of health. He advises that we pay little attention to such. Dr. Dixon says:

The boastfulness of ignorance is ordinarily not worthy of comment but when it jeopardizes the health of other people it is perhaps worth while to take up the cudgels.

There is a class of individuals who poo poo all warnings regarding matters of hygiene and usually end their assertions by informing you that their grandfathers never paid any attention to "such nonsense" and what's more they never have and here they are alive and well to show for it. Statistics however, show that these people who violate the laws of Nature often meet an untimely death. Unfortunately, some give an ear to such foolish boasting and run headlong into danger.

The transmission of disease by germs is most frequently attacked by the ignorant. Those people who accept without comment the statement that the world revolves upon its axis as a part of the solar system and thousands of other things which they are incompetent to work out for themselves, will bluster about the absurdity of germs causing disease. That typhoid fever, diphtheria, yellow fever, tuberculosis, anthrax, malaria, and pneumonia are caused by germs has been proven just as definitely as the fact that the world is round.

Fortunately exposure to disease, even of a communicable type does not always mean that the individual so exposed, will contract it. This is the reason that the boaster
May boast and stay
And live to boast another day.

WHAT OTHERS THINK

THE SHORTAGE OF CATTLE.

The American bankers association at its Kansas City convention has been considering the alarming decrease in cattle production. Much sentiment was developed in favor of an investigation of the subject by congress.

Congressional investigations commonly provide simply a lot of black covered government reports which few people read. However, this is an urgent subject, that some responsible authority should take up. Meat prices will keep climbing until more cattle are raised.

There is a difference of opinion among experts whether it pays to keep cattle on the average small farm. Little progress has been made at restoring them to the many thousand farms through the eastern and central and southeran states, where they used to be kept. Yet a recent investigation by Country Life in America seemed to show that cattle raising does not pay. In one typical case in the state of Deleware, a prifit of $1,370 was made in 18 weeks on 46 head of cattle, with manure enough to fertilize 36 acres of cantaloupes.

One trouble is that the modern farmer is bewildered by the many suggestions of the new things he ought to take up. After reading them all his head swims. He decides to keep along in the old way, at which he is doing quite well.

It would seem as if the great corporations concerned in meat production should be interested to work for a bigger supply. They must see that meat consumption per capita will surely fall off at present prices. If they would start a lot of demonstration farms, they could show the farmer just how cattle could be raised most profitably. Probably they could prove that it is possible for the small farmer to make a success of it.

When asked why they do not raise more cattle, farmers usually say that labor and feed and shelter cost too much. In the most fertile sections land can probably be used to better advantage in raising crops. But elsewhere the expense for feed must be greatly reduced.—New Castle Herald.

GINGLES' JINGLES

YOUTH.

Youth is something that's quite early in the history of a guy, and 'tis something beats it briskly from a geezer by and by; that's the general rule and order as old nature has it fixed, but we find a few exceptions some it seems have got it roped. They have got it bound and hitched to them, so it can't get away, years may come and years may ramble, but youth seems with them to stay; others are both old and foggy, 'fore they're hardly left their teens, seem to get the aged notions pulling heavy in their beans. And their frames begin to totter, when they should be young and spry, 'fore they get well under headway, they are laying down to die. Had DeLeon, who once journeyed down to Florida to find, there a fount of youth in which to plunge—instead looked in his mind, he'd have found, and so will others, there eternal youth is sung, it's the way you think and act your mental slant that keeps you young.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

A pretty flower girl in a Midland city screamed out her wares in such a shrill, penetrating voice that the occupants of the offices around found it a great annoyance.

Remonstrances had no effect on her, and she was so pretty that the magistrates could not be induced to fine her. So a certain professional man determined to end the nuisance, offered a liberal reward to the police officer who succeeded in stopping the girl's noise within a limited time.

A month went by and then, quite suddesly, the girl disappeared from the streets.

Shortly afterward a handsome young constable entered the professional man's office and claimed the reward.

"You are quite sure you have permanently rid us of the girl?" he was asked.

"Quite sure, sir," he answered.

"That's good. How on earth did you manage it?"

"I married her, and she's making her racket at home now," was the rueful reply.—Louisville Courier Journal.

During a recent suffrage parade a man carried one of the banners for his wife, who was not able to march. She sat in the grandstand and watched the parade go by.

When they reached home the husband said: "Well, Mary how did I march? Did I do the job right?"

"You carried that banner in the most disgraceful manner I ever saw," replied the angry spouse. "You dragged it in the dust all the way. What did you mean by doing that?"

"Didn't you see what was printed on that banner?" he asked.

"No, what was it?"

"Well, on that banner was printed this sign: "Men can vote. Why can't I."

HE'S GOING TO RETURN TO HIS WORK, HE SAYS

Arthur Jones is Now Well Man, Made So by Tanlac

Arthur Jones, harness maker, living at 118 E. 17th Street, Erie, Pa., made the following interesting statement regarding the remarkable benefits he received from Tanlac. Mr. Jones said:

"I have suffered greatly from stomach trouble and catarrh of the head and throat. My condition grew so bad that I have found myself in no shape to work for several months.

"I had no appetite and whatever I ate caused gas to form on my stomach and a sickening feeling followed. My nerves were all out of sorts and I was generally run down, so much so that I couldn't sleep much at night, but have remained awake for hours at a time. I needed the sleep, too, and my condition worried me no little.

"I saw Tanlac advertised in the papers and heard some friends talking about it. I got some of the medicine and have taken it for about two or three weeks. The first dose of Tanlac helped me and I have improved steadily ever since.

"I can now sleep good at night I have a fine appetite and I suffer no more stomach trouble or catarrh. I as a well man, and I owe it all to Tanlac. I am going to return to my work in a few days. That is what Tanlac did for me."

Tanlac is now sold in Charleroi exclusively by Pipers Pharmacy where the premier preparation can be had.

Wonderful Meteorites That Drop to Us Out of the Sky.

ONCE REGARDED AS SACRED

In the Early Days They Were Objects of Reverence and Worship as Is the Famous Stone at Mecca Today—Their Fiery Flight to Earth.

In considering the wonders of the universe have you ever realized how conspicuous among them are the meteorites, those wonderful messages dropped from the sky for us to wonder at and study? They are the only material objects which come to the earth from the vast outer world.

Among the collections shown in the National museum at Washington is a remarkably fine exhibit of meteorites It includes complete meteorites ranging in size from the tiniest pebbles to great bowlder like masses and casts reproducing giant forms like that of Bacubirito, which has been estimated to weigh twenty-five tons and still rests where it fell in Mexico.

The National museum has issued a handbook and descriptive catalogue of the meteorite collections in the museum, written by Dr. George P. Merrill, head curator of geology, from which the following is an abstract:

Although meteorites presumably have fallen since time immemorial, skepticism was felt at first by both the popular and scientific minds regarding the possibilities of stones falling from space In the few early recorded cases where meteorites seen to fall were recovered they were regarded as objects of reverence and worship. A stone which fell in ancient Phrygia, in Asia Minor, about 200 years before Christ was worshiped as Cybele, the mother of the gods Another, which dates back to the seventh century, is still preserved at Mecca, where it is built into the northeast corner of the Ka'aba and revered as one of the holiest of relics. The great Casas Grandes iron, weighing about 3,000 pounds, now in the national collection at Washington, was found in an ancient Mexican ruin swathed in mummy clothes in a manner to indicate that it was held in more than ordinary veneration by the prehistoric inhabitants.

The earliest known undoubted meteorites still preserved are those of Elbogen, Bohemia and Ensisheim, Upper Alsace. The first mentioned is iron, the second a stone. The iron was found somewhere about the year 1400 of our era. The Ensisheim stone, seen to fall on Nov. 16, 1492, about the time Columbus made his discoveries, was accompanied with a loud crash like thunder. Portions of this stone are to be seen in the National museum exhibit.

The fall of a meteorite is usually accompanied by noises variously described as resembling the fire of musketry, cannonading or even thunder. If the fall takes place during the periods of darkness it is also accompanied by a flash of light and followed by a luminous rocket-like trail. These phenomena are due to the rapid passage of the objects through the air and a consequent rise in temperature, sufficient to produce fusion of the outer surface and even ignition, thus giving rise to the thin, dark, glasslike crust which is found to cover all stony meteorites

The time of passage through the atmosphere is, however, too short to permit the heat to penetrate to great depths, and nearly all meteorites are quite cool, or scarcely warm, on reaching the surface of the ground. It is to the sudden rise in temperature and pressure of the atmosphere that the breaking up of a meteorite and its reaching the ground as a shower of fragments rather than a single individual are due.

We have little to guide us in estimating the speed at which a meteorite reaches the earth and its consequent power of penetration. The velocities as given by various observers vary between two and forty-five miles a second. The greatest recorded depth of penetration of a meteoric stone is that of Knyahinya, Hungary, where a 660 pound stone penetrated to a depth of eleven feet. On the other hand, still heavier masses have been found under such conditions as to lead one to infer that they scarcely buried themselves.

All statements relative to the temperature of meteorites immediately after reaching the ground must be accepted guardedly, owing to their extremely contradictory character. Some stones which fell in Styria in 1859 are stated to have remained in a state of incandescence for over five seconds and for a quarter of an hour were too hot to be handled. On the other hand, the Dhurmsala stone is said to have been intensely cold when picked up immediately after falling.

The largest known meteoric mass is that brought by Commander Peary from Cape York, Greenland. It weighed 73,000 pounds. The next largest lies in the plain near Bacubirito, in Mexico, and has been estimated to weigh some 50,000 pounds, while the third is that of Willamette, Ore., weighing 31,107 pounds. These are all iron meteorites. The largest known individual aerolite of meteoric stone is that of Knyahinya, Hungary, weighing some 550 pounds, now in the Vienna National museum.

Dr. Merrill says that all known meteorites were produced by the action of heat and have yielded no traces of animal or vegetable life, although parts of their peculiar structures were at one time mistaken for organic remains.

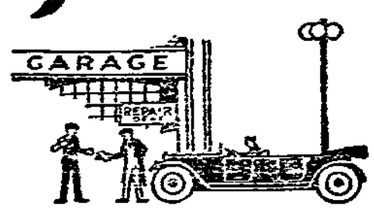
Why

so many Repair Bills



If there's one thing more than another that sours a man against motoring and makes him wish he'd stuck to the horse-and-buggy, it's having to dig down every week or so to pay for some darned thing that has gotten out o' kelter. Correct lubrication will help to keep your car out of the repair shop and your hand out of your purse.

Atlantic Polarine is "correct lubrication" for eight out of ten cars. Under certain conditions, one of the other three principal motor oils—Atlantic "Light," Atlantic "Medium" or Atlantic "Heavy"—may give better results.

But, in all events, at least one of those four oils is the one best suited to your particular needs. Ask your garageman which.

Atlantic Motor Oils are to correct lubrication what Atlantic Gasoline, the accepted standard, is to correct fuel. In either gas or oil, you can't go wrong on "Atlantic."

Drain your crank-case, wash it out with a little Rayolight Oil, put in a fresh supply of pure, honey-clear Atlantic Motor Oil. You'll have fewer bills for repairs and be glad you took the advice of oil experts.

Read up on this subject. We have published a handsome and comprehensive book about lubrication. It is free. Ask your garage for it. If they cannot supply you drop us a postal and the book will be sent you without charge.

SIRIUS AND THE DOG DAYS.

Time Has Worn Away the Link That Bound Them Together.

The dog days, when excessive heat is supposed to prevail, begin July 3, according to the ancient reckoning, and continue to Aug. 11. All sorts of traditions and superstitions are connected with this period, and various dates are also given.

In some sections the dog days are said to begin on July 24 and to end on Aug. 24, the latter date being the traditional birthday of the dog star Sirius, to the period from Aug. 4 to Sept. 1, inclusive, with the earliest and latest dates named.

As a matter of fact, the rising of the dog star, Canis Majoris or Sirius, has nothing to do with the affair at all. The rising of that star has been so accelerated by the precession of the equinoxes during the decade of more than 4000 years that the corresponding conditions for the ancient dog days no longer exist.

In ancient times in the latitudes of the Mediterranean the period of greatest heat nearly corresponded with that time in which the dog star rose at the same time with the sun. To this conjunction all antiquity and all the later followers of judicial astrology attributed a malignant influence.

Among the modern notions regarding the dog days is the absurd belief that it is during this period that dogs are most likely to go mad.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch

ALBRIGHT'S CYCLE STORE

536 McKEAN AVE. CHARLEROI, PA.

CHALMERS MOTOR CO. Detroit, Mich., U.S.A.

Quality First

After Nov. 30, it will cost you just $70 more to buy a 7-22 Chalmers. But the price on the 5-passenger 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers remains (for the time being) $1090 Detroit

Until midnight of Nov. 30 you can get a 7-22 Chalmers for $1280 Detroit—a car of rare ability, fascinating in body equipment, and, like a beautiful woman, of exquisite charm.

After that date the price becomes $1350 Detroit—$70 more. The $70 is just a few dollars less than the increase in cost of manufacture of this car since its appearance in June.

To those who have longed for the 5-passenger 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers—and have not yet possessed one, just a word of warning: the price remains unchanged just now—$1090 Detroit; we do not know how long this low price will continue. We reserve the right to increase the price without notice.

Only those who are buying materials such as go into high-grade automobiles can begin to realize the steady, upward trend of the materials market.

Just one condition today prevents a rise in price of the 5-passenger 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers—the fact that these cars are being made on a factory "work order" dating back several months.

Since the "work order" went through materials have jumped in cost again. When the current "work order" is completed and if materials remain at their present level or rise higher, only one course will be possible, an increased price.

Those who have been driving Chalmers cars know how diligent has been the Chalmers effort to set down cars of the quality kind.

They will understand how impossible it would be for Chalmers to dodge the increase-in-materials issue and maintain the prevailing price on the 7-22 Chalmers.

Lower the quality of the Chalmers car? Never. The Chalmers men take great pride, not only in the money the car makes for them, but in the car itself. And pride, as everyone knows, is a thing that can never be compromised.

As long as there's a name "Chalmers", there will be a quality car, and as long as there's a quality car there'll be a price fixed—not by the Sales Department—but by cost accountants.

And there'll be a fair deal. Chalmers says these two 3400 r. p. m. models will be continued into next season. You can bank on that. So that a Chalmers car you might buy now will be exactly like the one you would buy next spring.

Remember the $70 you can save now by anticipating the rise in price. There's an old Scotch proverb that says "A dollar saved is a dollar earned". $70 buys a good suit of clothes, a good pair of shoes, a good hat and some good gloves. Also it just about pays your dues at the club for a year.

Or, if it's a 5-passenger 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers you want, our advice is to get one now.

We are not sure the price is going up and we are not sure that it isn't.
